

About the Speaker

LeDerick Horne spent most of his time in school believing he did not have much of a future. A severe learning disability (LD) combined with low self-esteem led him to doubt he would be able to go to college or pursue a meaningful career. But in a challenging academic environment and with the proper support, LeDerick became an outstanding student, compiling a 3.75 grade point average. He transferred to New Jersey City University and graduated with honors from NJCU in 2003.

Since graduation LeDerick has become the head of his own real estate investment company called Horne & Associates, LLC. He was appointed the Board Chair of Project Eye-To-Eye, a national nonprofit that provides mentoring programs for students labeled LD/ADHD. He is also recognized across the country as an advocate for people with disabilities. LeDerick has facilitated workshops, delivered keynote presentations, and spoken to thousands of students, teachers, and service providers about his experiences.

(Question & Answer)

There is no such thing as a "one size fits all" approach to transition planning. Parents and students need to begin the transition discussion well before high school. This Transition Series will offer families, students and IEP teams the opportunity to really look at the unspoken pieces that go into student awareness of the transition process and their need for self advocacy.

Saturday, March 5, 2011

Today's Workshop

Objectives:

1. Determine how the Future Planning statement directly correlates to the development of the IEP.
2. Discover the things a student needs to consider in preparing for the future.
3. Share in a panel discussion with other students about their experiences .
